Session 1 (14:35–15:20 BST)

Workshop 1. NZIF 2.0 to go – all you need to know

Join our "NZIF 2.0 to go” workshop to explore the latest updates in the Net Zero Investment Framework. NZIF 2.0 incorporates new best practices and methodologies, expands coverage to additional asset classes, and enhances strategies for achieving net zero goals. Additionally, you’ll learn about updated NZIF guidance on target setting and integrating scope 3 emissions. This workshop will provide a dedicated Q&A section, giving IIGCC members the opportunity to engage directly with our experts.

Workshop 2. No net zero without nature

Building on insights from IIGCC Engage in February 2024, this session delves into the climate–nature nexus and its critical importance. As part of our work to integrate nature, we are proposing topic-based guidance focused on both nature and climate risks at the asset level, supporting engagement across various real economy sectors and asset classes. Join this workshop to learn more and help shape IIGCC’s outputs in this rapidly evolving space.

Workshop 3. NDCs 3.0 – Catalysing private finance for national transitions

Where are the key opportunities and potential spaces for investors to engage with governments to catalyse private investment to support countries climate goals? The NDC development can be an entry point to effective engagement. As countries start preparing their updated NDCs (due in 2025), and building on our recent publication in this area, this workshop aims to explore members’ priorities and support needed to better seize the opportunities to accelerate climate action and portfolio decarbonisation.

Workshop 4. Know the code: Climate stewardship

This an opportunity to reimagine what stewardship can do for the net zero transition ahead of the FRC’s fundamental review of the Stewardship Code this summer. Join this workshop to get to know the Code, our approach to stewardship, and create links between your efforts to decarbonise and the wider stewardship landscape.

Workshop 5. How asset owners can maximise net zero impact while protecting alpha. Sponsored by Ninety One

Asset owners and asset managers have been working to implement net zero commitments for some time, with many facing the dual challenge of implementing net zero strategies that have real world impact while optimising portfolio returns. The session will be an interactive discussion on how investors can do just that, including topics such as optimising impact and return through strategic asset allocation, and the barriers and opportunities to investing in the transition particularly in emerging markets.

Workshop 6. Beyond the vote: Voting for climate

Voting is a shareholder right and a critical part of climate stewardship, but how investors communicate their voting decisions after the AGM can be just as important and influential. We discuss members’ approaches to post-AGM communications, how to strengthen their net zero voting policies and practices and maximise the impact of ongoing engagement.

Workshop 7. Business as usual – Creating an enabling environment for net zero

The policy landscape plays a critical role in helping or hindering investor efforts to align portfolios with net zero and support real world emissions reductions. This workshop will explore some of the key opportunities for investors to advocate for policy that supports their net zero alignment activities and the decarbonisation of the real economy, both individually and working with organisations like IIGCC.

Workshop 8. Vital to the transition: Emerging markets and just transition

IIGCC is incorporating emerging markets and just transition perspectives into its guidance and setting up approaches to scale climate finance mobilisation into these markets. Development finance institutions, governments, and regulators are reforming to address the barriers facing investors in this space; sharing previously undisclosed loss recovery data and stepping up blended finance structures.
